

ADS INVITED TO U. OF I. ON FATHER'S DAY

Students At State University Will Be Hosts On Saturday of Illinois-Ohio Game.

(Special to The Argus.)

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 11.—Rock Island fathers are invited to be the guests of the students of the University of Illinois, Urbana, Nov. 20, which has been set aside as Dad's day. Fathers with sons or daughters at the university are urged to attend, the big feature of the day to be the Illinois-Ohio game.

Dads are invited to arrive Friday, although the program proper will not start until Saturday. The university brigade will pass in review. All of the university equipment will be turned out for this exhibition.

Immediately following the parade inspection parties of the university will be made up at the Illinois union. This action is taken so that the father of an engineering student may not suffer from lack of information and interest in visiting the college of agriculture. Business men will be entertained at a lecture by the president of the Simmons Hardware company of St. Louis.

Game Drawing Card.
The Ohio State-Illinois game will occupy the greater part of the afternoon. Students and fathers will mingle at a mixer at 5 o'clock in the gym annex. Women members will attend at this time. Members of the faculty will be present on this occasion to meet the fathers. Dinners will be held in honor of the dads in the organized houses at 6:30 o'clock.

President David Kinley will welcome the fathers at a huge smoker at 5:30 o'clock in the gym annex. Entertainment consisting in the main of athletic matches will be furnished, and food will be served.

WOMEN TAKING ARCHITECTURE AT UNIVERSITY

Ninety-Six Girls Are Enrolled in Course—Nine Already Have Graduated.

(Special to The Argus.)

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 11.—That women are entering man's field of work is evidenced by the fact that 96 women are enrolled in the department of architecture at the University of Illinois for this term. Until this fall, nine have graduated from the department. Two women are registered in mechanical engineering, but none are taking civil engineering.

Among the men graduates, three have attained particular distinction. Colonel Peter Junkersfeld, '15, a graduate in electrical engineering, held the position of electrical engineer for the Commonwealth Edison company until 1913. In 1914 he was appointed assistant to the vice president of the company. While in service in the war he was given the rank of colonel. During the war he built cantonments.

Bush Designs Station.
Lincoln Bush, '18, a graduate in civil engineering, has gained prominence by his special design of the railway passenger station which is now being used throughout the country.

Major Henry J. Bert, '16, also a graduate in civil engineering, acted for a time as contracting manager of the Denver office of the American Bridge company. Then he became chief engineer of Hollabird & Roach, and is now manager of this company which is planning the university development. While in the army he was made a major and a member of Pershing's staff.

A. L. Nelson, '16, mechanical engineer, was in the aviation corps during the war and was sent to England to investigate a design on the cam of an airplane to synchronize the shooting of the machine guns between the blades of the propellers as it revolves. It was on the basis of Nelson's report that most of the work of that kind was done in this country.

DEMOCRATS LOOK AHEAD FOUR YEARS

feat as a slap at the League of Nations but merely as the natural reaction of the American people to their war government, a reaction parallel to the political overturning of other governments in Europe. Indeed, the Democrats have not the slightest intention of abandoning the League of Nations as an issue. They mean to keep it alive and fight for that during the next four years. They plan to keep intact the movement of Republicans and Democrats who under Professor Irving Fisher constituted an independent pro-league organization.

New Fund Provided.

The Democrats are joyful for another reason. They couldn't get much money during the early days of the campaign and didn't begin to get funds in any quantity until the last part of September, but checks keep flowing in even after election and the confident prediction is made by the leaders that the deficit estimated between $200,000 and $300,000 will soon be collected and a new fund for reorganization provided.

As for leadership, the prospect is that Senator Underwood will be the real leader in congress. And he is a man who believes in caucus and party harmony and not in imposing his own views. He gave an example of leadership in the days just before the Democratic success in 1912 and won prestige enough to be regarded as a presidential possibility. He is personally popular and will have little difficulty in getting cooperation.

Outside of the halls of congress the question of leadership of a defeated party is more or less abstract anyway. Woodrow Wilson himself will have a few things to say in print, just as Theodore Roosevelt used to do, and probably the influence of Mr. Wilson will not be without considerable effect. Instead of one gun bombarding the Republicans, the Democrats expect to have several. The taxation program of the Republicans will be scrutinized with especial care, as will the effort of the Republicans to cut down the cost of living and bring back Liberty bonds to par as pledged in the campaign of President-elect Harding.

Sublime Confidence.

All this may sound like premature partisanship but the Democrats have determined not to embarrass the next president in any way but merely to keep calling the attention of the public to mistakes that may be made. The Democrats feel that the success of American activity of one political party is always acting as a check on the other. Instead of letting the Republicans have the whole field to themselves without criticism, the Democrats conceive it to be their patriotic duty to play the part of opposition party just as the Republicans did in the last few years. And the curious part of it all is the sublime confidence of the Democrats that they will recapture both houses of congress within the next two years.
